NEW COURSE BACHELOR OF INTERIOR ARCHITECTURE

Beginning in 2014 we will be offering a brand new University of Canberra program, Bachelor of Interior Architecture.

This program has been designed to give students the skills to plan, design, detail and supervise the construction of industrial, retail and residential building interiors.

Students will be able to explore a range of cultural and environmental issues associated with interior design, as well as learn about allied fields such as architecture and industrial design.

Students enrolled in this program will benefit from specialist staff who will be there to talk to students about course information and career outcomes across the full range of Holmesglen and University of Canberra programs.

We also understand that students and their parents are very busy and it’s not always possible to attend scheduled events. So if it is not possible to attend an Open evening students can register for one-on-one sessions. Just request an individual meeting in the area of your interest and our staff will contact students to arrange a day and time that suits.

It’s that simple. No more trying to get questions answered at big open day events. At Holmesglen our students are a name and not a number and we believe the personal approach is the best way to help your students make the best decision for their future careers.

Holmesglen Diploma of Graphic Design students have been internationally recognised for raising awareness about global issues with their designs placing in the top ranks of the 2013 Positive Posters competition.

The Positive Posters initiative aims to get people talking about a wide range of issues faced by the global community, from environmental awareness and health through to existing social commentary on topics like war, religion and reliance on technology.

To help spread this awareness, Positive Posters holds an annual global competition that calls on designers around the world to harness the power of image to convey their message. Designers are asked to develop posters that communicate their combined issue through image alone, with no text or typeface allowed.

From thousands of entries submitted, a group of thirty outstanding posters were short listed for consideration as the top three designs. Continuing a long history of design excellence, three of the posters short listed in the top thirty were entries by Holmesglen students: Trent Peters, Honey-Leigh Terrill and Supawit Akkassintawangkul.

“Every year we say, ‘This is the best top thirty,’ and this year was no exception,” said judge Leisha Muraki. “The 2013 top thirty was a stellar representation of the social, moral, political and human rights issues from nine countries across the globe.”

During an exhibition held at the end of last year, the final top three entries were chosen by a judging panel consisting of designers from globally recognised studios around the world.

Supawit’s entry, titled “Yellow Duck”, depicted a rubber duck covered in oil to highlight the effect that industrialisation can have on the environment, and impressed the judges so much that it was awarded the overall 3rd prize. This result is an outstanding achievement for Supawit, in what was considered to be a highly competitive, global field of designers.
